Subject: RE: PANDA v. Sportradar - Agreements with Sports Leagues

CAUTION: MAIL FROM OUTSIDE THE FIRM

Matt,

Your email contending that the Sportradar Defendants should have produced data rights agreements months ago is both inaccurate and incomplete.

The Sportradar Defendants responded to your referenced May 1, 2024 letter on June 7, 2024, objected to making any production under your identified Categories 44 & 59, and did not agree to produce any data rights agreements. PANDA and the Sportradar Defendants thereafter met and conferred, and PANDA's own June 20, 2024 summary of that meet and confer correctly reflects no agreement by the Sportradar Defendants to produce data rights agreements. Further, the Sportradar Defendants' July 25, 2024 email additionally makes clear that "Defendants do not agree that agreements with sports leagues and networks that are not for the Accused Products or components of such agreements as discussed above are relevant and defendants will stand on their objections as to this subset of the category." The Sportradar Defendants timely objected to PANDA's request for data rights agreements as, for example, the agreements were not then relevant, and despite the passage of many months PANDA never before raised any perceived issue with the Sportradar Defendants' position.

The Sportradar Defendants are assessing what additional discovery, including discovery related to data rights agreements, may be necessary in view of PANDA's newly-asserted antitrust claims (and will separately respond to PANDA's subsequent, March 10 letter). The Sportradar Defendants' proposed Second Amended Docket Control Order provides necessary and appropriate time in which to do so (including, if/as needed, providing notice to and/or procuring consent from non-parties under such agreements). PANDA's demands for immediate discovery, including with respect to data rights agreements and the case schedule, appear designed to prejudice the Sportradar Defendants.

Best,
Nick

Subject: PANDA v. Sportradar - Agreements with Sports Leagues

Counsel,

PANDA has been unable to locate in Sportradar's production its agreements with the NHL, NBA, MLB, or any other sports league concerning the licensing of (or otherwise authorizing Sportradar to distribute) official data rights. PANDA asked for these documents over ten months ago. 05-01-2024 Letter from M. Wood to D. Roodman, Categories 44 & 59. These documents are unquestionably relevant, and Sportradar should have no issue producing these agreements within a matter of days—as it should have done months ago.

Please confirm by Thursday, March 6, 2025, that Sportradar will produce these documents no later than March 21, 2025. Otherwise, please provide your availability to meet and confer this Thursday or Friday.

Regards,

Matthew Wood
